Coordinated by The National Quilt Museum, in partnership with The Quilt Alliance, National Quilting Day is an opportunity for everyone to experience the art of quilting. At the National Quilt Museum, visitors can watch a series of live quilting demonstrations and participate in a host of interactive make-and-take activities from 10 am until 4 pm. All National Quilting Day events are free with ticketed admission.

SJ McDonald is a singer and award-winning songwriter who has built her reputation the hard way, playing more than 75 shows a year across the USA. She is currently on tour with country music star Emily Ann Roberts. SJ grew up around family members who quilted, and she saw firsthand how the stitches weaved together to create something beautiful. Her single "The Quilt" weaves together the realities of chasing a dream as a woman in country music by stitching together sacrifice, resilience, and identity.

One of her dreams came true when she contacted Bonnie Schrock, executive director of The National Quilt Museum, to request permission to film a video for her new single, "The Quilt," at America's premier quilt museum. "We were delighted when SJ contacted us," said Schrock, "and her timing was perfect as it was just weeks before National Quilting Day. Her producers acted quickly to make it happen, and here we are celebrating SJ's video on our big day."

The Museum is open from 10 am–5 pm on National Quilting Day; regular admission applies. For the full event schedule, visit The National Quilt Museum's website.
